The National Bureau of Standards[1] was established by an act of Congress on March 3, 1901. The Bureau's overall goal is to strengthen and advance the nation's science and technology and facilitate their effective application for public benefit. To this end, the Bureau conducts research and provides: (1) a basis for the nation's physical measurement system, (2) scientific and technological services for industry and government, (3) a technical basis for equity in trade, and (4) technical services to promote public safety. The Bureau's technical work is performed by the National Measurement Laboratory, the National Engineering Laboratory, the Institute for Computer Sciences and Technology, and the Institute for Materials Science and Engineering.

The National Measurement Laboratory

Provides the national system of physical and chemical measurement; coordinates the system with measurement systems of other nations and furnishes essential services leading to accurate and uniform physical and chemical measurement throughout the Nation's scientific community, industry, and commerce; provides advisory and research services to other Government agencies; conducts physical and chemical research; develops, produces, and distributes Standard Reference Materials; and provides calibration services. The Laboratory consists of the following centers:

- Basic Standards[2]
- Radiation Research
- Chemical Physics
- Analytical Chemistry

The National Engineering Laboratory

Provides technology and technical services to the public and private sectors to address national needs and to solve national problems; conducts research in engineering and applied science in support of these efforts; builds and maintains competence in the necessary disciplines required to carry out this research and technical service; develops engineering data and measurement capabilities; provides engineering measurement traceability services; develops test methods and proposes engineering standards and code changes; develops and proposes new engineering practices; and develops and improves mechanisms to transfer results of its research to the ultimate user. The Laboratory consists of the following centers:

- Applied Mathematics
- Electronics and Electrical Engineering[2]
- Manufacturing Engineering
- Building Technology
- Fire Research
- Chemical Engineering[2]

The Institute for Computer Sciences and Technology

Conducts research and provides scientific and technical services to aid Federal agencies in the selection, acquisition, application, and use of computer technology to improve effectiveness and economy in Government operations in accordance with Public Law 89-306 (40 U.S.C. 759), relevant Executive Orders, and other directives; carries out this mission by managing the Federal Information Processing Standards Program, developing Federal ADP standards guidelines, and managing Federal participation in ADP voluntary standardization activities; provides scientific and technological advisory services and assistance to Federal agencies; and provides the technical foundation for computer-related policies of the Federal Government. The Institute consists of the following centers:

- Programming Science and Technology
- Computer Systems Engineering

The Institute for Materials Science and Engineering

Conducts research and provides measurements, data, standards, reference materials, quantitative understanding and other technical information fundamental to the processing, structure, properties and performance of materials; addresses the scientific basis for new advanced materials technologies; plans research around cross-country scientific themes such as nondestructive evaluation and phase diagram development; oversees Bureau-wide technical programs in nuclear reactor radiation research and nondestructive evaluation; and broadly disseminates generic technical information resulting from its programs. The Institute consists of the following Divisions:

- Ceramics
- Fracture and Deformation[3]
- Polymers
- Metallurgy
- Reactor Radiation

Foreword

The Law Enforcement Standards Laboratory (LESL) of the National Bureau of Standards (NBS) furnishes technical support to the National Institute of Justice (NIJ) program to strengthen law enforcement and criminal justice in the United States. LESL's function is to conduct research that will assist law enforcement and criminal justice agencies in the selection and procurement of quality equipment.

LESL is: (1) Subjecting existing equipment to laboratory testing and evaluation and (2) conducting research leading to the development of several series of documenents, including national voluntary equipment standards, user guides, and technical reports.

This document is a law enforcement equipment report developed by LESL under the sponsorship of NIJ as part of the Technology Assessment Program, which is described on page iv. Additional reports as well as other documents are being issued under the LESL program in the areas of protective equipment, communications equipment, security systems, weapons, emergency equipment, investigative aids, vehicles, and clothing.

Technical comments and suggestions concerning this report are invited from all interested parties. They may be addressed to the Law Enforcement Standards Laboratory, National Bureau of Standards, Gaithersburg, MD 20899.

Lawrence K. Eliason, Chief
Law Enforcement Standards Laboratory

The technical effort to develop this report was conducted under Interagency Agreement LEAA-J-IAA-021-3, Project No. 7101.

ACKNOWLEDGMENTS

This directory was prepared by the staff of the Law Enforcement Standards Laboratory (LESL) of the National Bureau of Standards under the direction of Lawrence K. Eliason, Chief of LESL. Its preparation was sponsored by the National Institute of Justice, Lester D. Shubin, Standards Program Manager.

ABOUT THE TECHNOLOGY ASSESSMENT PROGRAM

The Technology Assessment Program is sponsored by the Office of Development, Testing, and Dissemination of the National Institute of Justice (NIJ), U.S. Department of Justice. The program responds to the mandate of the Justice System Improvement Act of 1979, which created NIJ and directed it to encourage research and development to improve the criminal justice system and to disseminate the results to Federal, State, and local agencies.

The Technology Assessment Program is an applied research effort that determines the technological needs of justice system agencies, sets minimum performance standards for specific devices, tests commercially available equipment against those standards, and disseminates the standards and the test results to criminal justice agencies nationwide and internationally.

The program operates through:

The Technology Assessment Program Advisory Council (TAPAC) consisting of nationally recognized criminal justice practitioners from Federal, State, and local agencies, which assesses technological needs and sets priorities for research programs and items to be evaluated and tested.

The Law Enforcement Standards Laboratory (LESL) at the National Bureau of Standards, which develops voluntary national performance standards for compliance testing to ensure that individual items of equipment are suitable for use by criminal justice agencies. The standards are based upon laboratory testing and evaluation of representative samples of each item of equipment to determine the key attributes, develop test methods, and establish minimum performance requirements for each essential attribute. In addition to the highly technical standards, LESL also produces user guides that explain in nontechnical terms the capabilities of available equipment.

The Technology Assessment Program Testing and Information Center (TAPTIC) operated by a grantee, which supervises a national compliance testing program conducted by independent agencies. The standards developed by LESL serve as performance benchmarks against which commercial equipment is measured. The facilities, personnel, and testing capabilities of the independent laboratories are evaluated by LESL prior to testing each item of equipment, and LESL helps the Information Center staff review and analyze data. Test results are published in Consumer Product Reports designed to help justice system procurement officials make informed purchasing decisions.

Publications issued by the National Institute of Justice, including those of the Technology Assessment Program, are available from the National Criminal Justice Reference Service (NCJRS), which serves as a central information and reference source for the Nation's criminal justice community. For further information, or to register with NCJRS, write to the National Institute of Justice, National Criminal Justice Reference Service, Washington, DC 20531.

Directory of Law Enforcement and Criminal Justice Associations and Research Centers

The directory lists national, nonprofit professional and volunteer social action associations and research centers which are active in the field of law enforcement and criminal justice. The international and foreign organizations which are listed either have a large number of American members, have a U.S. chapter, or are doing work which is applicable to the United States. The local organizations which are listed either cover several States or are of national interest. The organizations are listed alphabetically. The format of an entry is: title of organization; mailing address; officer; telephone number; year founded; number of members; number of staff; description of purpose and activities; affiliations; publications; meetings. A subject index is included.

Key words: associations; criminal justice; directory; law enforcement; research centers.

Introduction

This is a directory of organizations that are active in one or more areas of the criminal justice system, including law enforcement, courts, corrections and rehabilitation. The directory lists national organizations primarily, but also includes regional organizations and local organizations of special interest as well as international organizations which have a significant number of American members, a U.S. chapter or subcommittee, or are doing work applicable to law enforcement in this country.

The types of national law enforcement and criminal justice organizations listed in this directory are limited by the criterion that they be nonprofit. Included in this category are professional and volunteer social action associations, research centers (usually connected with a university), and government agencies. Strictly social or fraternal organizations are not listed.

The information about each organization in this directory forms a separate entry. Each entry contains the following information: (1) the full title of the organization and its acronym, where applicable; (2) the mailing address; (3) a person to contact within the organization; usually an incumbent officer; (4) the telephone number at which a contact person can be reached; (5) the year when the organization was founded; (6) the number of members; (7) the number of staff, where applicable; (8) a brief description of the organization; (9) affiliations, if any; (10) publications, if any; and (11) the date and place of the next meeting or convention, or when they generally occur.

The first edition of this directory was developed primarily by scanning the Encyclopedia of Associations, the Research Centers Directory, and other general directories, and extracting from them the data on organizations relating to law enforcement and criminal justice. Whenever personal investigation revealed organizations which were not included in the primary source material, they were included in this directory.

Once the information was obtained from the general directories it was verified by telphone or by mail.

The organizations are listed alphabetically. A subject index, which is located at the back of the directory, is cross-referenced and is based solely on information given in the descriptions of activities.

The first edition of this directory was prepared by B. J. Latka of the Law Enforcement Standards Laboratory (LESL) and was issued in June 1973 as NBS Technical Note 752. The second edition was issued in March 1978 as NBS Special Publication 480-20. This thoroughly revised and updated third edition is the result of the efforts of several LESL staff members.

ACADEMY OF CRIMINAL JUSTICE SCIENCES
University of Nebraska at Omaha

Private, nonprofit organization headquartered in Denver, Colorado with affiliate Children's Division office in Washington, DC. Three primary program areas—Research/Policy Analysis, Training and Evaluation, and Advocacy/Information Dissemination.

The Children's Division conducts the National Study of Official Child Neglect and Abuse Reporting for the National Center on Child Abuse and Neglect. The study provides an annual analysis of nationally reported child abuse and neglect. Additional policy analysis activity includes research into the correlates of child abuse and neglect and analysis of state policies regarding intake, investigation and service provision for reports of child maltreatment. Staff and faculty provide comprehensive training, on a contract basis, to State child protective service workers, supervisors and administrators. The Association's training utilizes a curriculum designed as an integrated, comprehensive approach for serving families and children involved in abuse and neglect. The Division maintains an active advocacy program, with responsibilities shared by the Washington, DC staff and the Denver staff. Work includes lobbying and participation in legislative formulation; production of legislative alerts on pending children's issues; publication of a quarterly newsletter which includes updates on congressional activity, developments in the field of child protection and notice of meetings; and resources for child welfare professionals. Additional activities include information dissemination, publications and general networking.

AMERICAN INDIAN LAW CENTER, INC. (AILC)
P.O. Box 4456-Station A
Albuquerque, NM 87196
Director: Philip S. Deloria
Phone: (505) 277-5462
Founded: 1976
Staff: 13

The American Indian Law Center, Inc., was established to encourage the development of political, administrative and leadership capabilities of tribal governments. An Indian-controlled, nonprofit corporation, AILC provides broad-based services in legal research, policy analysis and technical assistance to American Indian tribes, organizations and individuals, as well as to governmental agencies at all levels. AILC originated in 1967 as part of the School of Law at the University of New Mexico (UNM), which provided facilities and advisement. In 1976, AILC became a separate entity maintaining offices at the UNM Law School and utilizing its many resources to provide the Law Center a wider range of technical capabilities. Major funding for AILC now comes from government contracts, foundation grants and tribal contracts. The staff—attorneys, public administrators, law school graduates and the support staff—are predominately Indian. AILC, Inc., develops and administers training for Tribal Court personnel, including seminars for tribal judges, clerks, advocates and prosecutors; technical paralegal workshops; and technical assistance in monitoring implementation of Indian legislation. Produces law and court procedure manuals. Drafts codes in land use, codes and procedures for Indian governments and tribal court systems, as well as publishing the Model Children's Code, incorporating material pertinent to the ICWA. Works with other organizations involved in Indian legal affairs including assistance for Alaskan natives on shareholder rights under the Alaskan Claims Settlement Act, corporation law, business/commercial law, land management, federal delivery systemss and government organization. Cooperates with the Commission on State Tribal Relations and the National Conference of State Legislatures, to inventory existing agreements between tribes and states; co-sponsors regional hearings to gather information, and develop model agreements in a number of areas...from hunting and fishing rights to foster care; maintains a handbook on tribal-state relations which provides guidelines for development of agreements between tribes and other governmental units; promotes intergovermental cooperation to reduce jurisdictional conflicts in governmental interaction and development of a policy of shared responsibilities. Sponsors Special Scholarship Program in Law for American Indians; conferences and seminars; maintains library.

Phone: (916) 443-4375
Founded: 1959

Founded in 1959 as the Institute for the Study of Crime and Delinquency, its first project was an international survey of corrections funded by the Ford Foundation. Since the 1965 publication of its final report, the American Justice Institute has completed almost 100 other projects for costs ranging from $10,000 to over $2 million each. Federal, State and foundation monies have financed projects throughout the United States, including Alaska and Hawaii. Project targets have been the official structuring of cities and counties to combat crime and delinquency, the courts, and police work on and for the whole criminal justice system, with corrections, per se, receiving more than half of the institute's time and attention. The Institute operates through a board of directors with the aid of a national advisory council, with project managers assigned to individual studies. A small staff runs headquarters.

The Federal Judicial Center is the research, development, and training arm of the Federal Judicial System, established by Congress in 1967 (28 U.S.C. SS620-629). By statute, the Chief of Justice of the United States is chairman of the Center's Board, which also includes the Director of the Administrative Office of the United States Courts and six judges elected by the Judicial Conference of the United States. The Center's Continuing Education and Training Division provides educational programs and services for all third-branch personnel. These include orientation seminars, programs on recent developments in law and law-related areas, on-site management training for support personnel, publications and audiovisual resources. The Center has an extensive continuing education program for probation officers and conducts sentencing institutes for judges pursuant to statute. The Research Division undertakes empirical and exploratory research on Federal judicial processes, court management, and sentencing and its consequences, usually at the request of the Judicial Conference and its committees, the courts themselves, or other groups in the Federal court system. The Research Division also evaluates new programs, such as drug aftercare. The Innovations and Systems Development Division designs and tests new technologies, especially computer systems, that are useful for case management and court administration. The division also contributes to the training required for the successful implementation of technology in the courts. The Inter-Judicial Affairs and Information Services Division prepares several periodic reports and bulletins for the courts and maintains liaison with State and foreign judges and related judicial administration organizations. The Center's library, which specializes in judicial administration materials, is located within this division.

The International Association of Fire Chiefs (IAFC) was organized in 1873 to further the professional advancement of the fire service and to assure and maintain greater protection of life and property from fire. The IAFC monitors Federal legislation, regulations and budgets which impact upon fire, emergency medical and emergency management organizations. As an international clearinghouse for technical information, the IAFC maintains an extensive library which contains publications and research material on topics related to the fire service. The IAFC maintains a research department which is dedicated to the study of emergency response and preparedness topics. As a publisher, the IAFC distributes a monthly magazine, a quarterly labor-management relations newsletter, and a weekly newsletter reviewing national legislation and regulations that affect the fire service. As the sponsor of the largest international conference for the fire service, the IAFC assembles an exhibit of emergency equipment and related products. The conference, through its workshops and special presentations, allows chief fire officers throughout the world to present their opinions and concerns on topics affecting the fire service.

SECTION OF CRIMINAL JUSTICE
American Bar Association
1800 M St. NW.
Washington, DC 20036
Director: Laurie Robinson
Phone: (202) 331-2260
Founded: 1920
Staff: 11
Members: 10,000

The Section of Criminal Justice is a professional membership organization for criminal law practitioners, and for lawyers who handle an occasional criminal case or become involved in any aspect of white collar crime or other criminal representation. Additionally, the Criminal Justice Section is the American Bar Association's primary expert and leader in the development of policy positions pertaining to criminal law and criminal justice system operations. Because of its systemwide perspective, the Section's membership includes defense lawyers, prosecutors, trial and appellate judges, legislators, law professors, law enforcement and corrections personnel, nonlawyer "Criminal Justice Associates" in some of these and allied criminal justice professions, and law students. The Section sponsors continuing legal education programs on trial tactics and techniques, emerging problem areas in criminal defense and prosecution, and substantive developments in the law. Practice-oriented and policy publications are published periodically, such as a recent "how to" guide for lawyers entitled Criminal Appeals Primer, and a recent Report on Computer Crime which presents a comprehensive analysis of the nature and occurrence of computer-related crime in America. Current efforts in the policy development arena include work toward the development of a model state RICO statute (Racketeer Influenced and Corrupt Organizations), a study of eligibility and recoupment practices in the provision of indigent defense services, the development of standards providing guidance in the controversial area of access by law enforcement agencies to third-party held records, and research on the cost impact of the death penalty on the justice system. The Section monitors State legislative developments and frequently testifies on behalf of the American Bar Association before the U.S. Congress on subjects ranging from voir dire by counsel to preventive detention and sentencing. Beyond these subjects, the Section's current volunteer committee structure addresses subjects including competency, environmental criminal law, prison and jail problems, grand jury reform, drunk driving, prosecutorial discretion, rules of criminal procedure and evidence, and white collar crime. The Criminal Justice Section currently sponsors a Juvenile Justice Standards Implementation Project and a Victim Witness Assistance Project which are also active agents in the spheres of policymaking, publications, and education.

Bonner Springs, KS 66012
President: Antone L. Dusil
Phone: (913) 441-6858
Founded: 1963
Staff: 20

Founded "to help rehabilitate inmates and former inmates of penal or correctional institutions." Members are ex-convicts who attend a prerelease training class run by the Foundation in a penitentiary, or other ex-convicts who attend a post-release class. The Foundation also offers counseling by ex-convicts and finds sponsors who help released inmates with employment and financial problems. The Foundation's biblical motto: "Know the truth and the truth shall make you free" (John 8:32), aims to help convicts realize they have alienated themselves from society and must change if they are to avoid returning to prison. The Foundation's seven steps of personal development are: (1) facing the truth about ourselves and the world around us, we decided we needed to change; (2) realizing that there is a power from which we can gain strength, we decided to use that power; (3) evaluating ourselves by taking on an honest self-appraisal, we examined both our strengths and our weaknesses; (4) endeavoring to help ourselves overcome our weaknesses, we enlisted the aid of the power; (5) deciding that our freedom is worth more than our resentments, we are using the power to help free us from those resentments; (6) observing that daily progress is necessary, we set an attainable goal towards which we can work each day; (7) maintaining our own freedom, we pledge ourselves to help others as we have been helped. The Foundation developed from Freedom House, a Kansas corporation founded in 1963 by the late W. P. (Bill) Sands, an ex-convict and author of "My Shadow Ran Fast," and "The Seventh Step." A national expansion program was begun and the name changed to 7th Step Foundation in 1965, with Mr. Sands also a founder of the national organization.

UNSDRI is part of the United Nations and can be described as a special voluntary-funded program. The basic purpose of UNSDRI is to encourage, coordinate, and conduct research on the phenomena of adult criminality and juvenile delinquency, their prevention and control. The UNSDRI research programme is structured in such a way as to follow the socio-cultural and politico-economic changes which affect societies, particularly in the newly emerging countries. Most of the research projects are devoted to ascertaining the phenomenology of criminal justice systems and their impact on this phenomenology, with the aim of suggesting ways of rendering these more human and responsive to the needs of the individual and the community. Besides conducting research, the Institute organizes and supports field studies on issues of particular concern for member countries and, in fact, these studies constitute a major part of the work program.

NBS Technical Publications

Periodical

Journal of Research—The Journal of Research of the National Bureau of Standards reports NBS research and development in those disciplines of the physical and engineering sciences in which the Bureau is active. These include physics, chemistry, engineering, mathematics, and computer sciences. Papers cover a broad range of subjects, with major emphasis on measurement methodology and the basic technology underlying standardization. Also included from time to time are survey articles on topics closely related to the Bureau's technical and scientific programs. Issued six times a year.

Nonperiodicals

Monographs—Major contributions to the technical literature on various subjects related to the Bureau's scientific and technical activities.

Handbooks—Recommended codes of engineering and industrial practice (including safety codes) developed in cooperation with interested industries, professional organizations, and regulatory bodies.

Special Publications—Include proceedings of conferences sponsored by NBS, NBS annual reports, and other special publications appropriate to this grouping such as wall charts, pocket cards, and bibliographies.

Applied Mathematics Series—Mathematical tables, manuals, and studies of special interest to physicists, engineers, chemists, biologists, mathematicians, computer programmers, and others engaged in scientific and technical work.

National Standard Reference Data Series—Provides quantitative data on the physical and chemical properties of materials, compiled from the world's literature and critically evaluated. Developed under a worldwide program coordinated by NBS under the authority of the National Standard Data Act (Public Law 90-396). NOTE: The Journal of Physical and Chemical Reference Data (JPCRD) is published quarterly for NBS by the American Chemical Society (ACS) and the American Institute of Physics (AIP). Subscriptions, reprints, and supplements are available from ACS, 1155 Sixteenth St., NW, Washington, DC 20056.

Building Science Series—Disseminates technical information developed at the Bureau on building materials, components, systems, and whole structures. The series presents research results, test methods, and performance criteria related to the structural and environmental functions and the durability and safety characteristics of building elements and systems.

Technical Notes—Studies or reports which are complete in themselves but restrictive in their treatment of a subject. Analogous to monographs but not so comprehensive in scope or definitive in treatment of the subject area. Often serve as a vehicle for final reports of work performed at NBS under the sponsorship of other government agencies.

Voluntary Product Standards—Developed under procedures published by the Department of Commerce in Part 10, Title 15, of the Code of Federal Regulations. The standards establish nationally recognized requirements for products, and provide all concerned interests with a basis for common understanding of the characteristics of the products. NBS administers this program as a supplement to the activities of the private sector standardizing organizations.

Consumer Information Series—Practical information, based on NBS research and experience, covering areas of interest to the consumer. Easily understandable language and illustrations provide useful background knowledge for shopping in today's technological marketplace.

Order the following NBS publications—FIPS and NBSIR's—from the National Technical Information Service, Springfield, VA 22161.

Federal Information Processing Standards Publications (FIPS PUB)—Publications in this series collectively constitute the Federal Information Processing Standards Register. The Register serves as the official source of information in the Federal Government regarding standards issued by NBS pursuant to the Federal Property and Administrative Services Act of 1949 as amended, Public Law 89-306 (79 Stat. 1127), and as implemented by Executive Order 11717 (38 FR 12315, dated May 11, 1973) and Part 6 of Title 15 CFR (Code of Federal Regulations).

NBS Interagency Reports (NBSIR)—A special series of interim or final reports on work performed by NBS for outside sponsors (both government and non-government). In general, initial distribution is handled by the sponsor; public distribution is by the National Technical Information Service, Springfield, VA 22161, in paper copy or microfiche form.
